Landscape Legacy in the Mile High City

Parks and open spaces have been invaluable components of the city's design and development since Denver's earliest days. This diverse open space network leverages the Rocky Mountain range and the American Prairie grasslands with unrivaled designed landscapes in the Beaux-Arts and Picturesque styles – with Modernist and Postmodernist landscapes as well. Designs by George Kessler, S.R. DeBoer, and Olmsted Brothers formed the foundation of the expansive Denver Park and Parkway System (listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1986) and the 14,000-acre Denver Mountain Parks System (listed in 1990). Later work by Laurie Olin, Lawrence Halprin, and I.M. Pei is now being complemented with new parks that are emerging from the industrialized riverbank.

What's Out There Weekend dovetails with the Web-based What's Out There (tclf.org/landscapes), the nation's most comprehensive searchable database of historic designed landscapes. The database currently features more than 1,800 sites, 10,000 images, and 900 designer profiles. And What's Out There is optimized for smartphones and handheld devices, and includes What's Nearby – a GPS-enabled function that locates all landscapes in the database within a 25-mile radius of any given location.

The Cultural Landscape Foundation®

Established in 1998, The Cultural Landscape Foundation (TCLF) is a 501(c)(3) organization that educates and engages the public in order to make our shared landscape legacy visible, identify its value, and empower its stewards. The organization's vision is that the public values and supports culturally significant landscapes and the safeguarding of this heritage for future generations. TCLF provides people with the tools to see, understand, and value landscape architecture, its practitioners, and our cultural landscape legacy in the way many people have learned to do with buildings and their designers. Through its website, lectures, outreach and publishing, TCLF broadens the support and understanding for cultural landscapes nationwide to help safeguard our priceless heritage for future generations. TCLF makes a special effort to heighten the awareness of those who impact cultural landscapes, assist groups and organizations working to increase the appreciation and recognition of cultural landscapes, and develop educational tools for young people to better connect them to their cultural landscape environs.
